Lyndon

Lyndon: The harder the problem, the more attractive it is to me.

I started my journey in public health, when I volunteered at a women's shelter in Washington, D.C.

I was by how fragile the social safety net was. Here were women, and they were just like my mom. It's one step between being unstably housed and being on the street.

It's a tragedy that if I know your ZIP Code, I can give you your life expectancy.

We need to have equitable access to healthcare, safe food, safe water, safe housing. My commitment is to community health.

How do we change society faster? It's a legislative action or a policy initiative, so I will lend my support and my resources.

BNY Mellon was very instrumental in giving me the courage to do what I wanted to do. I feel secure because I don't worry about my wealth. They have taken that completely off the table.

And it allows me to continue and deepen my commitment to my philanthropy. It's an opportunity to really reimagine a future and imagine the healthiest city or the healthiest nation that we could have.

That takes time, we didn't get here overnight, so I'm not going anywhere.
